I've done a lot of work with SES, (Search Engine Safe) URLs in the past. I new project has recently required I use them again.

This client knows a lot about Google placement so it's quite interesting. We'll see how they work.

Changes will probably be made to the red viper systems and green viper systems websites based on the lessons learned here.

See here for our sesConverter stuff, or see it in action.
